EDUCATION

Yale University

Ph.D., Political Science, December 1990

Cornell University

Bachelor of Science, Industrial and Labor Relations, May 1981

CURRENT POSITION

American University

Professor, School of International Service

Affiliate Professor, Department of Economics, College of Arts and Sciences

ADMINISTRATIVE POSITIONS

American University

Associate Vice Provost for Faculty Development, 2019-2020

Develop initiatives for post-tenure faculty, including mentoring faculty towards promotion to full professor.

American University

Founding Director, Master of Arts in International Relations (online degree), 2012 – 2014

I designed the curriculum, gained approval from school and university curriculum committees, budgeted (RCM model), recruited faculty to create courses and to serve as section leaders, oversaw content creation, evaluated program faculty, supervised program staff, undertook learning assessment, led recruitment activities, and made admissions decisions. (You can learn more about the MAIR degree and see examples from classes at: ironline.american.edu/about/student-experience/).

American University

Director of Doctoral Studies, 1999-2012

I managed all aspects of the SIS PhD program, including budgeting, recruitment, admissions, assessment, placement and staffing. I supervised program staff and instituted several substantial improvements to the program that cut the times to ABD and to completion of the degree by over one year, restructured financial aid to increase net size of fellowships, and improved placement significantly. I undertook a major initiative that greatly expanded the share of students from historically disadvantaged groups.

UNIVERSITY SERVICE

Principal Service Positions:

President, faculty of the School of International Service, American University, 2018-2019

The president organizes and chairs monthly faculty meetings, which are the principal legislative body of SIS. The president also chairs monthly SIS coordinating committee meetings and presides over SIS faculty meetings to discuss cases of reappointment, promotion and tenure.

Chair, Committee on Faculty Actions, American University, 2014-2018

The CFA is the university-wide appointment, promotion and tenure committee. The responsibilities of the Chair include supervising the equitable, thorough and timely evaluation of all faculty actions involving the reappointment, tenure, and promotion; overseeing all matters and policies relating to full-time faculty appointments, reappointments, tenure, and promotions; drafting amendments to the faculty manual and other documents related to reappointment, promotion and tenure; and conducting periodic reviews of unit-level reappointment, promotion and tenure guidelines.

University Trustee, American University Board of Trustees 2008-2010

My responsibilities on the Board included service on the Academic Affairs, Finance and Trusteeship Committees. I was also deeply engaged in formulating a new strategic plan for the university.

Chair, Faculty Senate, American University, 2008-2009

Undertook a comprehensive revision of the faculty manual, enacted an expanded family leave policy, and created university academic assessment policy.
